

hélène renaut

Prone to catching dreams and melodies from the salty air of the San Francisco Bay Area, Brittany native Hélène Renaut usually weaves them on guitar and vocals and delivers them in either French or English. Her songs have been described as 'tweedy tunes with literate lyrics, languorous like red wine' (Pat Johnson, West Coast Performer) and 'pastoral beauties that call to mind Donovan, early Joni Mitchell, Hope Sandoval' (Tim Sendra, AMG). She released a debut album with her band, Beam, in 2003 (Antenna Farm Records), and has just produced a collection of acoustic songs, Perfection's somewhere near your bones.

Enter her golden gardens and you will be swept away by brooding yet catchy melodies, intricate song structures - and a wistfully unique vocal style commanded by rich, poetic lyrical content.
